

To Burn a CD:

Note: The following instructions are for burning previously saved files.

1. Place a writable CD in your CD drive.
2. Windows XP opens a dialog box asking, "What do you want Windows to do?"
3. Select the Open writable CD folder option.
4. Click the OK button.

5. With the CD folder open, you can drag and drop files into it. Windows XP makes a copy of these files in a "staging area" until it is time to burn the CD, and displays a list of the contents waiting to be recorded.

TIP: If you do not want to copy files select and delete any files you don't want copied. The files are removed from the staging area only -- your original files are not deleted.

6. From the CD Writing Task menu, located on the left-hand side of the CD Drive folder window, select the Write these files to CD link.

7. The CD Writing Wizard dialog box opens.
8. Type the name you want to give the CD in the CD name textbox.
9. Select the Next button.

10. A window opens requesting you to Please wait... (for the data files to be written to the CD).

11. Complete the process by clicking the Finish button.

When burning is complete, the disc will be ejected. (The disc tray will open.)
