

Information Concerning Gas Leaks

The college utilizes natural gas in various buildings on campus. Gas has a characteristic aroma of rotten eggs. Whenever gas is detected in a building or other enclosed area, it should be treated as an emergency and immediately reported to the College Safety Department. Gas leaks, when left unreported, can result in an explosion with subsequent injuries or death to campus community members.

To limit the possibility of an explosion, avoid using light switches, fire alarms, telephones and appliances when gas is detected.
